

How Public Policy Can Support Where Work Is Going

WHERE WORK IS GOING

More Remote Work

80.9%

Employers with more than 10,000 employees anticipate 50% or more of their workforce working remotely on a permanent basis.¹

More Change Ahead

96%

Employers working to determine which roles are best suited for on-premises work, remote work or hybrid work.¹

OUR PRINCIPLES FOR PUBLIC POLICY REFORM

Public policies must support work
ANYWHERE.

Public policies should support work anywhere so that businesses and workers remain competitive.

Public policies must be
AGILE.

Public policymakers should give workforce mobility professionals the flexibility they need to go where work is going.

Public policies must be
ATTENTIVE.

Public policies must protect and develop the workforce while treating workers and compliant businesses fairly.

WE ARE THE EXPERTS

We Know Mobile Workplaces

Our more than 5,400 workforce mobility professionals know what it takes to safely and efficiently relocate and support workers.

We Support Workers

If a policy involves the recruiting, hiring, deploying and/or relocating of a working professional, we can help.

We Are a Voice for Small Business

Approximately 80 percent of our members are small-to medium-size businesses.

¹ Transformation of the Global Workforce: Remote Work, Worldwide ERC®, March 2021. <https://www.worldwideerc.org/remote-work>